Carpet Shopping

Mary and Dan sit down together in the living room, their favorite room in the house. They love this room, but after taking a long look they both realize that something is missing. Something could be added to make the room even better. After some discussion, Mary and Dan agree that a new carpet is just what the room needs and they set out to buy a new one.

They go to the store and find it is packed with carpets. Carpets lay on the floor and hang on the walls. Carpets hang from racks. Why, there are even carpets dangling from the ceiling! Mary and Dan look at each other and Dan smiles and says, "This could take a while."

Mary looks around the store and before too long she finds one she likes. It has pink and purple dots on it. She shows Dan the carpet. Dan looks at it, but doesn't feel the same way about it. "Hmm, I don't really like that one," he says, "Sorry."

Dan looks around the store and finds one that he likes. It has green and red stripes on it. He shows Mary the carpet. Mary looks at it, but doesn't feel the same way about it. "It's just too small," Mary says.

Mary and Dan continue to roam around the store looking at the carpets. At the same time, they both spy a tan carpet hanging from a rack in the far corner. It doesn't have dots or stripes. It is tan and plain. Happily, both Dan and Mary seem to like this one.

Mary and Dan decide to buy the tan carpet. They take it home with them and lay it down in the living room. The living room looks wonderful with the new carpet.
